

Legacy Redefined: The Fight for Our Children’s Future.

By Glenn Meder

What legacy do you want to leave your children and grandchildren?

Maybe you’ve saved up money or property. You have an estate plan, and your lawyer will disperse your assets appropriately. Good for you.

But is this enough?

Have you left your children a world that will allow them to have a good, happy, and meaningful life?

Have you encouraged them to think for themselves? To question illegitimate orders and rules? To stand up boldly for the individual rights with which our Creator has endowed us?

After all, our children will not be able to invest their lives with meaning and satisfaction and happiness if they aren’t allowed to have sovereignty over their minds and bodies—if they’re not permitted to be free.

Because here’s the cold truth: The world that our children and grandchildren are going to inherit has the potential to be much darker than the one you and I grew up in.

Over the past few years, we have seen a highly coordinated advance of tyranny in the formerly “free” countries of the world.

Intelligence agencies are actively and illegally spying on citizens and colluding with Big Tech companies to silence freedom of speech and control what we do, who we interact with, and even what we are allowed to think.

Government agencies lie to us. As the so-called pandemic attested, governments censor scientists, bribe doctors and hospitals, corrupt the scientific method, and cover up the harm and death from the diseases

FROM THE EDITOR

Today I have an important message for state legislators, governors, and citizens of the USA.

The history of humankind is that of domination—of kings and queens ruling over their “subjects,” of the “elite” dictating to the peasants, of the powerful brutalizing the weak, and of cruel tyrants enslaving the masses.

Our Founding Fathers fundamentally changed this hierarchical approach with the Declaration of Independence and the US Constitution. They declared that we are endowed by our Creator with certain unalienable rights. These rights are inherent in us, and no government has the authority to infringe upon them.

These two sacred documents took away power from the so-called ruling class and gave it to the people. More than this, they declared, and codified into law, that “We the People” own this country. We are in charge! The President, Congress, the courts, and government bureaucrats, are not our “rulers”; rather, they are our servants.

These values are in our DNA. “We the People” choose freedom!

The world’s elitists, however, are predators who are determined to gain power over us “peasants.” Many of them are members of the World Economic Forum (WEF). For years, the WEF has worked to create a cartel of the powerful, whose goal is to crush our freedoms and take away our possessions. Billionaires, multinational corporations, international bankers, celebrities, activists, professors, government leaders, and heads of non-governmental organizations (NGOs) have declared war on us and on Western culture.

Why? Because the concept of individual rights is a Western value, and it flies in the face of the control structures they are trying to put in place.

This is why Europe and the US are facing an all-out invasion of illegal immigrants. The illegal crossings at the Mexico/US border, which number in the thousands per day, go on unimpeded. More than this, the federal government is doing everything it can to encourage this invasion of migrants who do not share our values.

This is why “woke” Hollywood screenwriters are pushing gender dysphoria and bodily mutilation on teens. It’s why universities and scientific institutions are corrupting the scientific method and critical thinking by pushing cult-like beliefs of gender and race and by firing and silencing doctors and scientists who challenge the narrative. It’s also why prosecutors are letting violence and crime go unpunished.

We are witnessing an all-out attack on our values of self-reliance, generosity, and individual liberty. It is the planned destruction of the West.

But why do they want to destroy our values of individual freedom?

Their goal is to implement a system of absolute surveillance and control. WEF founder Klaus Schwab put it succinctly, “You will own nothing and be happy.”

There are a number of key aspects of their plan, such as a digital ID, total surveillance, a collapse of the free market system, censorship, destruction of small businesses and family-owned farms, corruption of science, decimation of Christian churches, and complete control over everyone’s financial lives with a new central bank digital currency (CBDC), which will replace the US dollar (and every country’s currency).

These puzzle pieces will come together to form a social credit system, which will literally enslave the human race (see this month’s article, “A Legacy of Freedom”).

Already the central banks of 140 countries are taking steps to launch a CBDC. The WEF, which is the linchpin of this plan, is working with Big Tech and the central banks to develop a unified control system. Many countries launched a vaccine passport during the COVID panic—their way of sneaking in the digital ID.

Each country's social credit system will reward or penalize individuals and institutions for how well or how poorly they abide by their ESG system—also referred to as Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (DEI).

This is an incredibly tightknit system of control. It is already shaping universities and multinational corporations, many of which are now almost completely captured. The next goal is for every country to implement digital IDs and CBDCs nationwide.

The timeline for having the entire control system in place globally is 2030. That's shockingly soon! This is why we see such tremendous upheaval in the world right now.

Once the systems of control are in place, it will be too late for us to stop them. We must act now.

Unfortunately, we cannot count on the federal government to fix this problem. Rather, it is up to citizens and state governments to take back power from the technocratically controlled federal government.

How can our states check this power grab?

By following the law. The US Constitution is the foundation of our legal system, and all laws that violate it are illegal laws. The Tenth Amendment of the US Constitution drastically limits the power of the federal government. It says: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."

Our federal government is not superior to state and local governments. The Constitution's Supremacy Clause gives the former "supremacy" only in accordance with the Constitution. The states have the right and obligation to nullify federal overreach.

I believe our only hope for saving this great land is for states to step up and protect our individual rights. Beyond this, "We the People" must remember that our rights come from God and that no government has the authority to infringe upon our rights.

For the sake of our freedom and the freedom of future generations, we must act immediately to proactively pass laws that protect our rights and our values.

The time to take back our power is now. The law is on our side, not theirs.

they hype and the “cures” they espouse.

They make up lies about CO2 and the “climate crisis”, while falsifying data, paying off scientists, and frightening Americans into believing that we must drastically reduce our carbon emissions or we will doom our planet, even though China’s increase in carbon output far outpaces any cuts that we could possibly make.

They look for opportunities to initiate and engage in bloody wars, which steal lives, fortunes, land and resources, all the while pretending to advocate for peace and to be the innocent, aggrieved party.

No matter what the issue, governments bully us into accepting the approved narrative and they crush anyone who questions their authority and their story.

Yes, governments are sowing the seeds of tyranny with reckless abandon. But it’s even worse than that. Their despotic decisions and actions aren’t simply random. They have a plan. A worldwide plan.

Governments around the world are putting in place a technological infrastructure that will give them and their corporate cohorts total surveillance and absolute control over the global population.

Their goal? Our enslavement. This is not an exaggeration. The effect of today’s government policies is to literally enslave humanity.

Throughout history, there has always been a small class of people who, because of their bloodlines, their wealth, their education, and their position in political and social hierarchies, believe they are superior to everyone else. They believe it is their right to amass more of everything and to deprive their “inferiors”—us—of the little we own, until we own “nothing” and are “happy” about it!

But while these few have always desired to conquer and enslave the rest of us, they now have all the tools at their disposal to do so. They have been working diligently to put the pieces in place. And when they have completely implemented their plans, their control over us and over all the earth’s animals and natural resources and terrains will be absolute.

All governments have the goal of implementing digital IDs to centralize all our data. Centralization of power is always great for tyrants and awful for us. And since information is power, centralized data is centralized power. When these would-be rulers have information ABOUT us, they have power OVER us.

All countries are working hard to implement central bank digital currencies (CBDCs). CBDCs will replace cash and give the people in charge total surveillance capability. But CBDCs are about more than just surveillance. CBDCs will be programmable, which means we will be rewarded for doing what “they” (the politicians and the influential private entities they work for) want us to do and will be penalized for doing whatever “they” don’t want us to do.

Many of the puzzle pieces are in place now. For example, look up any flight on Google Flights. Next to each flight there’s a carbon score. Soon, we will all receive a carbon credit allotment. Our overlords will assign each of us a small amount of carbon to use within a specified period. Each of us (except the elite) will be tracked via our digital ID and will have to stay within our carbon allotment in order to save the planet, or there will be consequences. Use too much carbon for the month and we may find that we’re not allowed to buy a plane ticket. Or our electric vehicle (which we will be forced to buy) may not fully charge. Or maybe we will be allowed to drive only 30 miles that week.

As they roll out their decades-old-plans, it is clearer than ever why they want us all to have EVs and “smart homes” and live in “smart cities.” It’s also more obvious than ever that they do not care one iota about the environment. All they care about is their ability to control us. They use their climate change propaganda as a scare-us-into-submission tactic.

As I touched upon above, the environment is far from the only issue they’re using as an excuse to control us. They’re putting into place an entire system that reflects their psychopathic urge to purge us of our values, property, prosperity, privacy and even our identity as individuals with rights and liberties.

- Dare to stand up at a school board meeting and argue against sexualized books in elementary schools or against CRT and racial division—and you may be put on a government watch list.
- Refuse to use someone’s chosen pronouns and you may be fired.
- Take efforts to stop your child from seeking a medical procedure to change their gender, and you may have your child taken away while you are thrown in jail – it has happened.
- Donate to a freedom-oriented cause, and you may have your bank account frozen.

This is the dark future they’re working hard to create.

Is it enough to leave your children money in your will? Or are your children counting on you to fight for their freedom?

And if we do nothing about it, this will be our future. If you think the world is crazy now, you haven’t seen anything yet. Our children and grandchildren could grow up in a pitch-black world.

The question facing us right now is this: Are we going to leave a legacy of freedom for our children, or are we going to leave a legacy of enslavement?

The good news is that this control system is not fully operational. So NOW is the time we must step up and stop it from happening. In ten years, it will be too late.

I was recently talking with a personal defense instructor who teaches women how to defend themselves. He explained that women who are attacked often give up without much of a fight. But if that same woman’s children are in danger, he said, she will transform into a ferocious mother bear who will die before she lets anything happen to her “cubs.”

That is the mental switch we need to turn on right now.

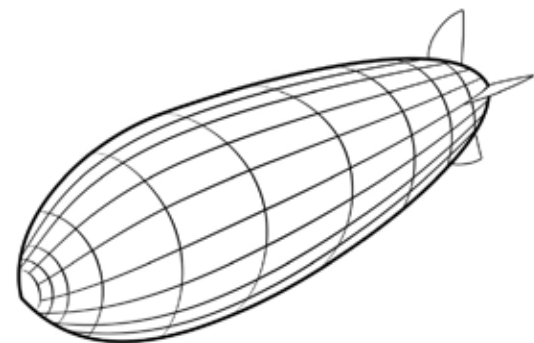

If saving our own freedom isn’t enough motivation, let’s do this for our children and grandchildren. They’re counting on us to transform into protective mama bears who go all out to stop the psychopaths from their plan of enslaving the human race.

We MUST ensure that freedom of speech and all the concomitant freedoms enshrined in our minds and hearts survive. Any action designed to crush our God-given liberties must be defeated. That includes digital IDs and CBDCs and climate change lies and all forms of government intrusion on our privacy.

Now is the time to stand tall, tower over the bullies who are trying to terrorize and tyrannize us and let loose our inner mama—our papa—bear!

America is at a Crossroads.

By Joe Withrow

For the last two generations, the success plan was clear.

Go to school > get good grades > go to college > get a good job.

If you followed that plan and had a good work ethic, a successful middle-class lifestyle would come easily to you.

Back then, there were very few roadblocks to starting a business. Opportunity was everywhere.

That was the American dream. It's what inspired countless immigrants to leave their homeland to create a new life in this country.

But that dream is fading.

It's fading because we no longer respect the ideas of liberty and independence that America was built on. As a result, reckless government spending has driven up everybody's cost of living dramatically.

The government finances its spending by printing more and more money. It's debt-based money, which the US borrows from the Federal Reserve Bank and must pay back, with interest—financed with our taxes.

The monetary policy of inflating the money supply, famously called quantitative easing, which the Fed employed after the 2008 financial crisis, reduced interest rates but increased consumer prices.

Recently the Fed has been practicing quantitative tightening, which has sent interest rates higher but hasn't lowered prices for consumer goods and services. Because the damage has already been done.

Decades of ever-rising consumer prices has been wiping out the middle class. And now with normalized interest rates, it's become even harder for Americans to build a middle-class life.

And that's not just an opinion. It's evident in all the data. Today I have two tables for you that spell it out. First, look at Table A.

This table tracks, from 1940 to now, the median price of a new car, the price of ten gallons of gas put into that car, and the price of five pounds of ground beef.

As we can see, it's not a pretty picture. Prices for all three products have risen dramatically over every ten-year period in modern history.

That said, we have to compare these costs to the median income to get

Item	1940	1950	1960	1970	1980	1990	2000	2010	2023
New Car	$850	$1,510	$2,600	$3,450	$7,200	$16,950	$22,165	$29,217	$48,008
Gasoline (10 gal)	$1.10	$1.80	$2.50	$3.60	$11.90	$13.40	$15.90	$31.10	$38.80
Ground Beef (5 lbs)	$1.00	$1.50	$2.25	$3.50	$4.95	$4.45	$7.40	$11.80	$25.40

Item	1940	1950	1960	1970	1980	1990	2000	2010	2023
Median Home Price	$2,938	$7,354	$11,900	$17,000	$47,200	$79,100	$119,600	$232,800	$430,300
Median Annual Income	$1,368	$4,238	$5,434	$9,184	$19,173	$28,979	$38,891	$49,276	$74,580
Income to Home Price	47%	58%	46%	54%	41%	37%	33%	21%	17%

a better feel for the story. And that's what we can see in Table B.

Here, we're tracking the median home price compared to the median annual income going back to 1940.

As was the case with new car prices, home prices have risen significantly every decade. But incomes have, too. So, it's that third line, "Income to Home Price," that we need to focus on. It shows us exactly what percentage of the median home the average salary can cover.

A median-priced home costs $430,300 today. The median annual income is $74,580. That means the average person's salary can cover only 17% of the median home price.

We can see just how dramatic today's income-to-home price differential is by looking at past data.

For instance, if we go back to the turn of the century, the median income in the year 2000 could cover 33% of the median home price. That's nearly twice as much as can be covered today.

Then, if we go back to 1970, the median salary covered more than half of the median home price: 54%. If the average American's income were to cover 54% of today's $430,300 median home price, he would have to bring in $232,362 annually—or approximately three times as much as today's average income-earner is actually making.

What these numbers illustrate is that it has become harder and harder to live a comfortable middle class life in the United States because inflation has eroded the value of our dollar... thus, costs have risen far faster than incomes.

And now we're faced with a new threat that could make this dynamic even worse.

In June 2020, an international organization called the World Economic Forum (WEF) announced what it calls the "Great Reset" initiative. The WEF pitched it as an economic recovery plan in response to COVID-19... but that was just the cover story.

The Great Reset is an all-out attack on market-based capitalism, free enterprise, conventional energy production, and the traditional values that made America and western civilization great.

And that's not an exaggeration. These people were arrogant enough to make a commercial that pitches the slogan, "You'll own nothing and be happy".

Central to their plan is the implementation of central bank digital currencies (CBDCs).

Implementing CBDCs is the tip of the spear that is intended to reset the entire financial system—at least if the World Economic Forum (WEF) globalists have their way.

And it all starts with redefining what money is . . . and our relationship to it.

The CBDC Will Redefine Money

The WEF-globalists, in league with the central banks of all countries, are intent on making all money digital and programmable. I'm sure they will hail it as "smart" money. I'm equally sure the establishment media will fawn over how this smart money is so much better than the country-specific currencies we have had up to now.

But hold on! Don't believe their platitudes. That programmability they are dead set on creating is what would allow our money to be turned into an object with which the globalists can manipulate and control us. That is to say, they'll use it as a "carrot and stick" system to strongly encourage us to do and say the things they want us to do and say.

If we fall in line with their preferred lifestyle for us, we'll be able to spend our CBDC money freely at all approved locations. They might even give us a bonus for good behavior. They could credit our CBDC wallet with additional funds if we're extra-compliant.

But if we don't comply, we may face penalties.

Perhaps we'll find our money frozen for a period of time. Like a school teacher scolding disobedient students, they'll put us in a time-out. Or perhaps, like bullies, they'll confiscate half of our funds for bad behavior—with the promise to restore our balance if we shape up.

In addition, the programmable nature of CBDCs will enable the globalist power structure to engage in coordinated "stimulus" policies.

When the economy begins to slow, they could inject extra CBDC money into our wallets . . . but with a catch. That new money would be programmed to expire within a certain period of time. If we didn't spend it in an approved way before the timer hit zero, it would vanish.

So, it's not a stretch to say that CBDCs are about financial enslavement.

Sure, it may be a soft version of slavery. And there would almost certainly be plenty of carrots to go with the sticks. But slavery is slavery, no matter how you slice it.

Now, there are plenty of individual solutions we can each implement to mitigate this attack on our liberty. Glenn and Eric's newly named Privacy Academy is chock full of them. I, too, have quite a few mitigating solutions we can each make on the finance and investment side as well.

But if we want an all-encompassing solution to the problem, there's only one fix: the restoration of sound money, which we once had in this country.

To understand what happened to our money, we must first understand what money is, and what characteristics it must contain.

Now, I know that may sound a little strange. We all use money every day. We're familiar with it. But have we really thought about it?

Where does money come from? Why is it valuable?

What Is Sound Money?

The short answer is that money is a unit of account that serves as a medium of exchange.

Stated more clearly, money is a way to measure value. We use it to pay each other for goods and services. Anything that serves these two purposes can serve as money.

But, to be viable over long periods of time, money must contain several additional characteristics. Money must be:

1. Portable
2. Divisible
3. Fungible
4. Durable

Let's examine each of these characteristics in more detail.

(1) Money must be portable. Not hard to explain: We need to be able to carry money with us and transfer it easily to others.

(2) Money must be divisible. This one's easy, too: We need to be able to make change out of our money. It should break down into consistent smaller units that add back up to consistent larger units.

(3) Money must be fungible. This is a fancy way of saying that money should be uniform. A US dollar in my pocket should be the same as a US dollar in your pocket. A Euro in my bank account should be the same as a Euro in your bank account. A one-ounce gold coin in my safe should be the same as a one-ounce gold coin in your safe. A Bitcoin in my wallet should be the same as a Bitcoin in your wallet. You get the point.

(4) Money must be durable. To be viable over long periods of time, money needs to serve as a store of value for us. We should be able to save our money and come back to it in a year . . . or in 10 years . . . or in 50 years and still be able to buy things with it. In other words, good money should maintain its purchasing power over long periods of time.

For money to be durable and retain its purchasing power over time, it must be relatively scarce. Otherwise, people would not want to trade goods and services for it. This is why rocks and seashells don't work as money. They're too abundant.

This is just basic supply and demand economics.

We can categorize any money that adheres to all of these principles as "sound money."

Sound money is important because it keeps consumer prices from rising dramatically—spiraling up as we saw in the tables above. Sound money is also important because we need it in order to have a vibrant middle class.

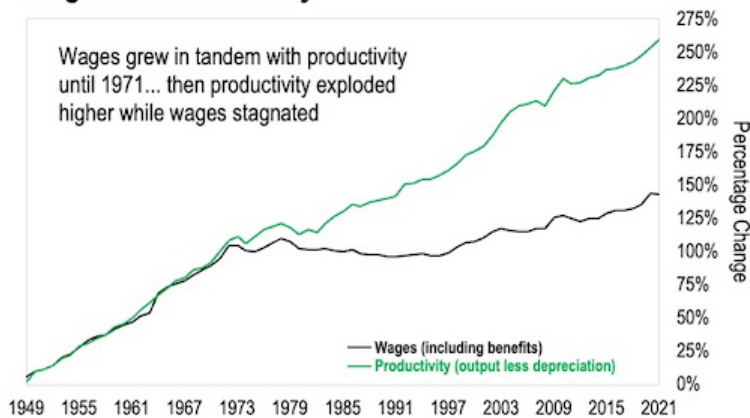

I have another chart to share with you that demonstrates this point:

This chart compares the growth in median US wages, adjusted for inflation, against total American productivity. The data spans the period from the late 1940s to the present day.

It's clear that wages and productivity were in sync until 1971. The average person's salary increased proportionally with America's output of goods and services. Just as it should.

But look at what's happened since then. Our productivity powered forward, but our inflation-adjusted wages stagnated.

forward, but our inflation-adjusted wages stagnated.

Why?

In 1971, President Richard Nixon cut the dollar's last link to gold. Up to that point, foreign countries could exchange their dollars for gold through what was called the "gold window."

This prevented the US government from printing too much money. If it had, foreign countries would respond by exchanging all their dollars for gold.

But once Nixon closed the gold window, all bets were off.

Suddenly, the government could print as much money as it wanted to. The only consequence was that the dollar gradually lost its purchasing power. That's what drove prices higher.

Look at what has happened to our dollar since 1970:

This chart comes directly from the Federal Reserve Bank. The Fed's own data shows that the US dollar has lost nearly 88% of its purchasing power since 1970. This is why nearly everything has increased in price dramatically.

No wonder it has become so difficult for all but the wealthiest Americans to get ahead financially.

When we see our cost of living rising across the board, it's not because everything is getting more expensive. It's because the dollar has lost so much of its purchasing power—and that's because the government—the Fed—has been free to print new dollars at will.

Purchasing Power of the U.S. dollar

But it doesn't have to be this way.

The Sound Money Solution

My friends, the darkness cannot survive the light.

We can see, clear as day, what the Fed and the government have done to our money. They have destroyed nearly 88% of the dollar's purchasing power since 1970, dramatically driving up our cost of living across the board.

And now the globalists' plan for a CBDC, unspoken and unseen up until now, is out in broad daylight. It's nothing short of a plot to financially enslave us.

The solution is for us to get back to sound money. And it all starts at the personal level.

For starters, we can each move some of our money into gold, silver, Bitcoin, and/or Monero. Doing so insulates our money from inflation and will protect its purchasing power long-term.

There's no law that says we can't pay for goods and services using these alternative forms of money.

Returning to sound money has the potential to create a circular economy of sorts. That is, the more our local farmers and our local business owners accept sound

Water that is free from toxins is fundamental to good health.

Our society uses over 100,000 chemicals. Today, toxins contaminate every aspect of our environment.

"But," you may say, "my local government assures me that our water is safe."

Your tap water may be legally "safe" to drink, but it still could contain harmful chemicals.

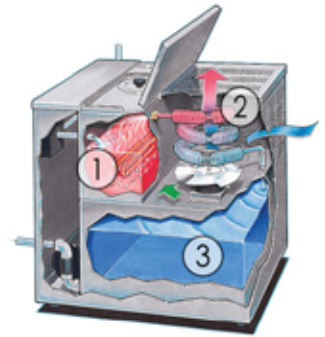

How can this be? Simple. The government uses the legal definition of the term "safe" drinking water, not the English language definition. Many toxins aren't regulated.

Distillation duplicates nature's water cycle to produce consistently pure water for decades. It's the single best method for removing contaminants from water.

money in exchange for their goods and services, the larger the circular economy becomes.

What we're talking about here is what America was supposed to be—and perhaps was for a little while. A land of free people conducting their lives and running their communities as they saw fit.

I realize this may sound too idealistic . . . but the sound money movement is already underway.

I now pay for my haircuts with Bitcoin. And I hope to start buying meat, eggs, and produce from my local farmers using Bitcoin also. It's just a matter of getting the local farmers set up with the infrastructure they need to accept alternate payments.

My friends at the non-profit Bitcoin Bay are even farther along than I am. They are educating farmers and small businesses in the Tampa Bay area on Bitcoin. They show these companies exactly how to accept Bitcoin as payment for goods and services. This includes training in Bitcoin accounting procedures and good practices.

Bitcoin Bay has successfully onboarded a wide range of local businesses in Tampa. That, in turn, has created a circular economy based on Bitcoin.

Looking in the Tampa business directory, we can find ranchers, berry farmers, personal trainers, auto mechanics, accountants, roofers, hair stylists, and many others who now accept Bitcoin as payment. That means folks here can buy goods and services from these companies using Bitcoin without ever needing to move back into dollars.

But we don't have to be limited to just Bitcoin. Goldbacks and silver coins could work just as well.

The key is that we should think seriously about creating a market for sound money now—ahead of the coming CBDC push. I say that because up to this point all the advice in alternative financial circles has been to hoard these alternative assets.

Sure, maintaining a reserve of gold, silver, Bitcoin, and Monero certainly has its place in a thoughtful financial plan. But if we're serious about avoiding a CBDC and restoring sound money to this country, we must actually use the tools we have available.

We can also accelerate the restoration of sound money dramatically at the state level.

As I write this in February 2024, eleven states have legalized gold and silver as legal tender. They are (in alphabetical order): Arizona, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, West Virginia, and Wyoming. A similar bill is pending in the Missouri legislature.

In addition, many other states are currently developing bills and regulations to allow people to use gold and silver as legal tender. We should encourage this. I'd love to see Bitcoin recognized as legal tender as well.

Having gold, silver, and Bitcoin authorized as legal tender would be a great step towards restoring sound money in this country. It would give us alternatives that we can fall back on immediately in the event of economic turmoil, continued inflation, and the rollout of CBDCs.

So, if I may, I'd like to close with a note of hope and optimism.

Matthew quotes Jesus of Nazareth as saying, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." Throughout the gospel, Jesus spoke at length about the necessity for his followers to adopt a new morality and a new lifestyle based on the Golden Rule: "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them" (Matthew 7:12).

Using sound money is a major way we can move our society back in that direction. Sound money gives us the ability to create ecosystems based on voluntary transactions—transactions that drive mutual benefit for all parties involved.

What's more, the restoration of sound money will unlock a world of abundance for humanity.

The fact that our money constantly falls in value is what creates artificial scarcity. By that I mean we all have to squeeze every single dollar we earn because so much of our purchasing power is being taken from us.

Sound money will fix that.

And once it does, it will be far easier for all of us to make a living and create financial security for ourselves and our families. From there, we'll have the ability to invest in making our communities vibrant and resilient once again.

At the time of the American Revolution, a gentleman named Thomas Paine wrote a pamphlet called "Common Sense." It caught on like wildfire. The very first line reads: "We have it in our power to begin the world over again."

I think we're right back at that point today. But in our remaking of the world, our most powerful tool must not be violence. That doesn't work, and it's not in accordance with the Golden Rule.

Instead, the tool we have that the globalists fear more than anything else is sound money. That said, it's just a tool. We are the ones who have to use it—and use it wisely.

Indeed, "we are the ones we've been waiting for."

Let's make it happen.

One of my all time favorites! Bob Johansson splurged and had his head cryogenically preserved in case of death, then he dies crossing the street. He wakes up 117 years later to find that his mind has been uploaded to a computer on a space probe and has to find a new home for humanity.

A Battle for American Ideals and Freedom

Most people who read this newsletter have been subscribed for years. I am truly grateful that you've stuck with me, and that you care what I have to say.

The focus of this newsletter changed in April of 2020, because I saw COVID for what it was, a highly-coordinated advance of tyranny in the "free" countries of the world. At first, I was dismayed at how many people were falling for the blatant propaganda, but over time, I have been delighted to see people waking up to the truth: that freedom is a privilege we can no longer take for granted.

This is when I realized that freedom and truth were my core values in life.

My hope is that we (me and you) can work together to peacefully fight for the American ideals of peace, prosperity, justice, freedom and property rights so future generations can grow up in a free world and can enjoy a wonderful life.

Yes, there are very real, very powerful opponents to freedom. These people want to enslave the human race, and they are putting the puzzle pieces in place to actually make this happen. If we don't wake people up now, our world will be a much worse place by 2030.

But while they are incredibly strong, I am, in fact, optimistic about our future. Why? Because now people's eyes are open to the slow march of oppression that has been with us for decades. Those who previously worked in the shadows, now have to work in the light. And we see them and their actions for what they are.

Yet, I also see that many people still have their eyes closed. And while I am an optimist, success in securing our freedom is not a given.

Too many people still trust the mainstream media, which is just pure propaganda.

Too many people still trust the psychopaths in the government to save us from the psychopaths in government.

Too many people still trust the corrupt scientific leaders who are destroying the scientific method and critical thinking.

And the people who have their eyes open don't know what to do. They feel overwhelmed and helpless and that the fight has already been lost (which is not true).

So here is my advice to you: the single most important step you can take is to simply shine the light of truth.

Don't try to force your views on others.

Don't get in someone's face and yell at them (please don't).

Simply share ideas, such as . . .

- Our rights come from God and not the State, which means that the government does not have the authority to take our rights away.
- Our political representatives are our servants, not our masters.
- We need to cherish the Constitution, which is our line in the sand that tells power seekers that we will not allow them to encroach on our rights.
- Any federal law that is contrary to the Constitution is an illegal law, and that the states and the people have the power and the duty to nullify such laws.

Share ideas even if the government makes it illegal to do so. Especially then.

And this brings me to the Liberty Zeppelin.

I want the Liberty Zeppelin to not just be a newsletter, but I want it to be a movement. We are now printing it as a PDF and as an online newsletter because we want to make it easy for you to share the profound, yet simple ideas that are at the heart of freedom.

My favorite quote from Leonardo DaVinci is, "There are three types of people: those who see, those who see when they are shown, and those who do not see."

You and I are the people who see. We can't ever impact those who will never see. But we can open the eyes of "those who see when they are shown". Those are the people I am trying to reach, with your help.

We have a lot of plans to grow the Liberty Zeppelin to turn it into an actual movement. We want to reach as many people with the message of freedom as possible.

To do this, I need your help.

First, share this newsletter with everyone you can.

Second, please go to www.LibertyZep.com and become a premium subscriber. We don't receive money from the government. We don't have wealthy supporters. This newsletter is entirely reader supported.

Third, please support our advertisers! And if you run a business, contact me about our very attractive advertising packages.

I am grateful that you have chosen to continue to read what I have to say. I hope to continue to earn your trust as we secure freedom for future generations.

Thank you!
